

GLOCAL HIGH GRADE EUROBONDS FUND

FACTSHEET NOVEMBER 2024

Macroeconomic Update

November proved to be a moderately positive month for investors, with 60% of bonds finishing in the green. Among these, 62% of Investment Grade bonds and 53% of High Yield bonds posted gains.

The U.S. Treasury yield curve remained relatively stable on the short end but shifted 10-15 basis points lower on the medium and long ends, partially recovering from the sharp selloff seen in the previous month.

October's macro data provided the Federal Reserve with room to cut interest rates by 25 basis points at its first post-election meeting, held November 7. Economic indicators further eased investor concerns about a potential recession. November PMI significantly exceeded expectations, unemployment declined, and annual inflation aligned with forecasts at 3.3%.

The next Federal Reserve meeting is scheduled for December 18, with market participants assigning a 75% probability to another 25-basis point rate cut.

Past performance is no guarantee of future results. All investments involve risks including the risk of possible loss of principal. The market value of a Fund's portfolio may decline as a result of a number of factors, including adverse economic and market conditions, prospects of securities in the portfolio, changing interest rates, and real or perceived adverse competitive industry conditions. The Fund invests in securities and other investments that may be illiquid, which hold the risk that the securities will not be able to be sold at the time desired by the Fund. The Armenian securities markets have substantially less trading volume than the securities markets of OECD countries. Additionally, the capitalization of the Armenian securities markets is highly concentrated. This combination of lower volume and greater concentration in the Armenian securities markets may create a risk of greater price volatility than in the securities markets of developed economies.
