Disclaimer
The data, views and forecasts in this document is for information purposes only and shall not be regarded as an offer, solicitation or recommendation for an investment. Past performance is no guarantee of future results. All investments involve risks including the risk of possible loss of principal. The market value of a Fund's portfolio may decline as a result of a number of factors, including adverse economic and market conditions, prospects of securities in the portfolio, changing interest rates, and real or perceived adverse competitive industry conditions. The Fund invests in securities and other investments that may be illiquid, which hold the risk that the securities will not be able to be sold at the time desired by the Fund. The Armenian securities markets have substantially less trading volume than the securities markets of OECD countries. Additionally, the capitalization of the Armenian securities markets is highly concentrated. This combination of lower volume and greater concentration in the Armenian securities markets may create a risk of greater price volatility than in the securities markets of developed economies. The views and forecasts contained herein are those of the GLOCAL team based on information that they believe to be reliable. These opinions may change over time.

MACROECONOMIC UPDATE

In January 2026, most fund constituents posted modest gains. The S&P 500 rose about 1.2%, extending its positive start to the year despite mid-month volatility and a sharp sell-off linked to tariff threats that briefly erased gains. Bond markets were fairly stable: U.S. 10-year Treasury yields hovered near ~4.26%, balancing inflation expectations and cautious positioning ahead of monetary policy decisions.

Equities were supported by resilient corporate earnings and overall market breadth, though tech and growth stocks experienced bouts of volatility tied to macro and policy headlines.

Global conditions remained mixed. The International Monetary Fund (IMF) updated its World Economic Outlook, projecting stronger global growth of around 3.3% in 2026, as technology investment and adaptability offset trade headwinds. In the euro-area, inflation eased to 1.7% in January, below the ECB's 2% target, but the European Central Bank kept rates unchanged at 2.0% amid persistent uncertainty.

Commodities diverged: Gold rose robustly (~9%)through much of January on safe-haven flows, while Bitcoin fell near $80,000 by month-end after earlier strength reflecting renewed risk-off sentiment and liquidity tightening.
