

GLOCAL HIGH YIELD EURO BONDS FUND

FACTSHEET MAY 2025

Macroeconomic Update

May 2025 was a mixed month for bond investors, with 61% of dollar bonds ending lower. About 72% IG dollar bonds ended in the red, while 77% of HY bonds ended in the green. This came on the back of the rise in US Treasury yields after US President Trump delayed his tariff policy, allowing for negotiations with different nations within a time period.

Markets also repriced rate cut expectations by the Fed following this and stable economic data from the US. From pricing-in about 75bp in rate cuts for 2025 as of end-April, markets are now pricing-in about 50bp in cuts. The month of May saw the Treasury yield curve shift further higher from April, with a parallel upward move of ~25bp across the curve. Global corporate dollar bond issuances stood at USD 276bn in May, 16% higher than April. As compared to April 2024, issuance volumes were up 8%.

Past performance is no guarantee of future results. All investments involve risks including the risk of possible loss of principal. The market value of a Fund's portfolio may decline as a result of a number of factors, including adverse economic and market conditions, prospects of securities in the portfolio, changing interest rates, and real or perceived adverse competitive industry conditions. The Fund invests in securities and other investments that may be illiquid, which hold the risk that the securities will not be able to be sold at the time desired by the Fund. The Armenian securities markets have substantially less trading volume than the securities markets of OECD countries. Additionally, the capitalization of the Armenian securities markets is highly concentrated. This combination of lower volume and greater concentration in the Armenian securities markets may create a risk of greater price volatility than in the securities markets of developed economies.
