

Glocal High Yield Eurobonds fund

FACTSHEET

DECEMBER 2023

Macroeconomic Update

Bond markets continued to rally in December, once again providing positive returns across the fixed income spectrum. The ongoing trend of strong macroeconomic data combined with a more dovish outlook from the Federal Reserve provided the backdrop that was needed to further boost returns on both equities and bonds.

The Fed's updated summary of economic projections showed inflation, and specifically their favoured core PCE measure falling more quickly than anticipated in September, while the "dot plot" of rate expectations also indicated a faster pace of rate cuts next year. With the Fed now anticipating rates to be 50bp lower at the end of 2024 than they had forecast in September, it gave the markets the green light to drive rate expectations lower, which in turn caused a strong rally in bond yields and credit spreads. Futures markets are even more optimistic - first cut is expected in March with total 175 bp decrease in 2024.

Past performance is no guarantee of future results. All investments involve risks including the risk of possible loss of principal. The market value of a Fund's portfolio may decline as a result of a number of factors, including adverse economic and market conditions, prospects of securities in the portfolio, changing interest rates, and real or perceived adverse competitive industry conditions. The Fund invests in securities and other investments that may be illiquid, which hold the risk that the securities will not be able to be sold at the time desired by the Fund. The Armenian securities markets have substantially less trading volume than the securities markets of OECD countries. Additionally, the capitalization of the Armenian securities markets is highly concentrated. This combination of lower volume and greater concentration in the Armenian securities markets may create a risk of greater price volatility than in the securities markets of developed economies.
