

GLOCAL HIGH YIELD EUROBONDS FUND

FACTSHEET JANUARY 2025

Macroeconomic Update

The first month of 2025 was relatively favorable for bond investors. A total of 69% of securities ended the month in positive territory, with HY and IG bonds rising in roughly equal proportions. There were no significant shifts in the UST yield curve, though yields declined slightly following soft inflation data.

January macroeconomic data indicated lower-than-expected economic growth, but inflation and unemployment figures raised hopes for more than one rate cut this year, keeping investor sentiment generally positive. According to futures market data, the market now expects a 25 bps rate cut in both June and December.

The data, views and forecasts in this document is for information purposes only and shall not be regarded as an offer, solicitation or recommendation for an investment. Past performance is no guarantee of future results. All investments involve risks including the risk of possible loss of principal. The market value of a Fund's portfolio may decline as a result of a number of factors, including adverse economic and market conditions, prospects of securities in the portfolio, changing interest rates, and real or perceived adverse competitive industry conditions. The Fund invests in securities and other investments that may be illiquid, which hold the risk that the securities will not be able to be sold at the time desired by the Fund. The Armenian securities markets have substantially less trading volume than the securities markets of OECD countries. Additionally, the capitalization of the Armenian securities markets is highly concentrated. This combination of lower volume and greater concentration in the Armenian securities markets may create a risk of greater price volatility than in the securities markets of developed economies.
